POLITICS IN THE PULPIT .- The manifold blessings and valuable privileges voucheafed to us as In 1775 it was a people, by our admirable form of government, should be, as the Pennsylvanian justly remarks, the pride and the boast of every true American. There is no country on the face of the globe where public opinion, speaking from the forum, through the prese, and permeating a thousand varied channels, exercises so direct and potent an influence in shaping our laws and institutions, brethren, who are slaves. and adapting them to the demands and exigencies of our progressive civilization. The Pressa resistance equivalent to a revolution.

Enjoying thus these unexampled privileges, is there no danger that we may run into excess convert, through our folly, our blessings into a blistering curse? Danger always lurks near the are sometimes in close proximity.

We have thought these few observations appropriate in introducing our subject, inasmnch as they cover the whole ground upon which we intend to base our protest against what we are constrained to believe to be a growing evilgrowing, too, out of the very source from which flows all that makes our noble fabric of government worth preserving and perpetuating.

For a number of years past, we have been named and shocked to observe an increasing disposition on the part of Ministers of the Gospel to lug, in some way or other, in their discourses, allusions of a political and partizan character, entirely irrevelant to the subject in hand; and | Verily, a good man has "fallen in Israel." particularly, during the late political canvass the practice became so common in some sections of the country-so bold and brazen in its exhibition—as to excite serious alarm in the breasts let and 2d wards, of prudential and right-thinking people, that the 3d and 4th wards, cause of true Christianity would be greatly and 6th and 6th wards, irredeemably damaged by its nnchecked indulgence. While it brings in question the good taste and the good judgment of the minister who is betrayed into the weakness, it cannot fail to be offensive to at least a portion of his congregation. A denomination of Christians, like any other promiscuous assemblage must necessarily posed of members of all the various poli must inevitably begel schisms, breed discontent, and mangurate a status in the Church anything but favorable to the proper reception of those vital truths and teachings of the Divine Word, which it is the special province of the Minister of the Gospel to illustrate and to enforce. Bedes, there is no conceivable excuse or paliation for this eternal meddling with politics on the part of a portion of the clergy. They cannot build even the excuse for their derilictions in this regard, on the ground that the country is destitute of political teachers; and that, therefore, it is incumbent upon them to step from the sacred de k, and instruct the people as to the conscience we have enough and to spare, of those who are ready, and willing, and amhitious slaves. And they being very good friends and to serve the nation, and take care of its material neighbors, and all nuder the same King, I must, de tinies, without extending our researches into the pulpit for mouthy declaimers and frothy to supply all practical wants and practical purposes! In many parts of the South the minister has faithfully discharged the duty of his "calling" and left the discussion of politics where it belongs-to politicians.

In many particulars, German farmers sur-pass even the people of New England, who, of late, have put in a claim, it would seem, to be the ne plus ultra in all things. They understand, or if they do not understand, they observe the laws of health better than even the rural repulsion of the plus and the rural repulsion of the second population of Massachusetts; and the result is that they are really the finest race of men, phy-rically, to be found within the borders of the United States.

Fince thy dear arm beneath my drooping nead, And let me lowly needle on thy bress!

Thes turn those coul-litories on me and prace My parting lips to taste the cextacy imparted by each long and inspering kins.

The next in the climactic series is by Tennyson, poet lauriate of England. It is a case of lubial suction—a strong case. It is maintained by cis-Atlantic critics that the word "soul," in the last line but one should be "sole." This criticism doce credit to the critics, and being approved, would do the author much also; for the sole of a lady's shoe through her lips, would be a discovery second only to the "Northwest passage."

"Last aight when some one spoke his name, from my swit blood that went and came, A thousand little shairs of fame. Were shivered in my nairow trame, O love, O fire! Once he drew, with one long kies, my whole soul through My lips, as sun light draweth dew."

Alexander Smith's humor is peerless He under the influence of a kiss, is reckless, bloudy and dangerous to all monarchical institutions lew, you who have triends among the ladies:

"My scal leaped up beneath thy tunid kiss; What then to not were growns. Or pain, or death' cartli was a round of bliss, t weemed to walk on thrones."
